Inflation Protection: 2.3% increase to pensions in 2007

In January 2007, all OPTrust pensions will increase by 2.3% to keep pace with the cost of living. For new pensioners who retired in 2006, the increase is prorated for the length of time you received a pension this year.

Your pension is increased based on the rate of inflation as measured by Canada's Consumer Price Index (CPI). The maximum increase in any single year is 8%. The remainder of any increase over 8% will be carried forward and applied in future years.

You may wonder why the adjustment does not always reflect the rates reported by Statistics Canada from year to year. Well that's because Statistics Canada reports monthly changes and your OPTrust pension adjustment is based on the average of the monthly changes over the year.

EXAMPLE

Year	Adjustment	Annual Pension
2007	2.3%	$21,206.80
2006	2.2%	$20,730.01
2005	1.7%	$20,283.77
2004	3.3%	$19,944.71
2003	1.6%	$19,307.56
2002	3.0%	$19,003.50
2001	2.5%	$18,450.00

Mary retired December 31, 1999 with an annual pension of $18,000. Following Mary's first year of retirement, her pension immediately jumped by $450. Over the last seven years Mary saw her pension go up by $3,206.80. Because OPTrust pensions are payable for life, Mary will continue to see her pension increase to keep pace with the cost of living. When Mary dies, her eligible spouse (if applicable) will receive an indexed survivor pension too.

Government settles insured benefits class action lawsuit

An agreement was reached in the insured benefits class action lawsuit between the Government of Ontario and retired Ontario Public Service employees in May 2006. The class action lawsuit was initially launched in 2004 in response to Government approved changes to insured benefits for retirees that took effect on June 1, 2002.

OPTrust appointed a Privacy Coordinator and conducted a thorough review to determine how to enhance our privacy policies keeping our members and pensioners in mind. In fact, OPTrust along with other public sector pension plans already had strict standards in place about dealing with personal information.

Adjusting pensions based on average annual changes rather than specific monthly changes better reflects the increase in the prices for goods and services.

Inflation protection adds up

Inflation protection is an important feature for OPTrust retirees and plan members. It protects the value of your pension during retirement. To understand how inflation protection impacts your pension, the example on page one shows the increase of a pension over time.

About CPI

According to Statistics Canada, CPI is an indicator of the consumer prices encountered by Canadians. It is obtained by calculating, on a monthly basis, the cost of a fixed “basket” of more than 600 separate goods and services purchased by the average Canadian consumer. The basket contains various products including housing, food, entertainment, fuel and transportation. Since the contents of the basket remain constant, the changes in the index reflect price changes. The CPI is a widely used indicator of inflation in Canada.

Financial settlement

The settlement, negotiated between the Government of Ontario and the class members, includes a one-time financial payout for each class member. All class members who met the eligibility requirements received a one-time payment of $351.23 in October 2006.

To receive a settlement payment, eligible pensioners:

- began receiving a pension between August 28, 1974 and June 1, 2002
- qualified for insured benefits based on their service in the Plan
- must not have completed an Opt Out Coupon

Method of payment

To help get your payment to you faster, OPTrust worked with the law firms to ensure that class members received compensation either by direct deposit or cheque. As required by the Court Order, you were paid in the same manner as your OPTrust pension. If your pension is paid by direct deposit, your settlement compensation was paid in the same manner. If you currently receive your pension by cheque, your settlement cheque was mailed to your home address. For direct deposits, the payment was identified in your bank account as “Settlement.”

As part of the process, the law firms relied on OPTrust to identify and facilitate the payment to each pensioner in the class action. OPTrust maintained control of your banking information to ensure your privacy was upheld. Your personal information was used only for the purpose of this settlement claim. Your personal information remains confidential and secure, and is not distributed to any third parties.

Future insured benefits and drug cards

The lawsuit does not have an impact on your insured benefits with the Government of Ontario. Your existing coverage remains unchanged. The Government will issue drug cards to all pensioners eligible for insured benefits no later than November 30, 2007.

YOU ASKED

Question: In the summer issue of The Pension Connection under Federal Personal Tax Credits, the Basic Personal Amount was reduced to $8,639 from $9,039. In 2005 the figure was $8,648, why is there a difference?

Answer: Effective July 1, 2006, the Basic Personal Amount was reduced to $8,639 from the previous figure. However, in January 2006 the amount increased to $9,039 up from $8,648 the previous year. This figure changed in January and again in May of this year. All figures are correct. To see a comparison from year to year visit the Public Works and Government Services website at www.pwgsc.gc.ca.

Question: I read in the news recently that Statistics Canada incorrectly reported the CPI over the last five years. Will this have an impact on my OPTrust pension?

Answer: No, your pension amount will not change. While Statistics Canada admitted understating Canada's inflation rate over the past five years by a tenth of a percentage point, the Consumer Price Index is never revised. Although the error has been identified, Statistics Canada has decided not to revise the historical inflation numbers. However, the correction will find its way into indices used to adjust your pension on January 1, 2007. OPTrust's inflation adjustment is calculated annually based on the Consumer Price Index; as a result our prior inflation adjustment figures will remain the same. For more information contact Statistics Canada at 1-800-263-1136.

Question: I opted out of the insured benefits class action lawsuit. Can I opt back in?

Answer: No. If you completed the Opt Out Coupon included in the 2004 Notice of Certification you are automatically excluded from the class action lawsuit and settlement. You cannot "opt in" to the settlement. If you have any questions, please contact the law firm Cavalluzzo Hayes Shilton McIntyre & Cornish LLP at 416-964-1115 or www.retireesclassaction.com.

Question: My former colleague received a settlement payment. Why didn't I receive payment as well?

Answer: You may not have met the eligibility requirements for the class action lawsuit. To qualify for the class action settlement you:

- retired before May 1, 2002
- are eligible to receive insured benefits, based on your years of service and credit in the OPSEU Pension Plan, and
- did not complete an Opt Out Coupon in 2004, which automatically removed your name from the class action.

Pensioners who have qualified for the class action lawsuit based on these criteria have received a payment.

Question: Why did I receive my settlement by direct deposit if I didn't provide my banking information to the law firms?

Answer: As part of the settlement as ordered by the court, OPTrust coordinated the direct deposit payments on behalf of the law firms so your banking information would not be shared. We took this approach to ensure that your personal information remained safe and secure, which is a top priority for us. Your banking information is used by OPTrust for the purpose of this settlement claim only, and will not be distributed to the law firms or any third parties.

Canada Pension Plan and Old Age Security benefits

Are you eligible for Government benefits? Do you know when to apply for CPP and OAS? Like most OPTrust retirees, your pension will likely be just one component of your retirement income. You may qualify for Canada Pension Plan (CPP) and Old Age Security (OAS) benefits too. It's important to know when to apply and how to apply, since these benefits do not automatically begin when you turn age 65.

Canada Pension Plan

Canada Pension Plan benefits normally begin the month after you turn 65, but you may be eligible for reduced benefits beginning as early as age 60. In order to be eligible at age 60, you must either stop working or earn less than the allowable maximum pension payment ($844.58 in 2006) for two consecutive months.

It's a good idea to apply at least six months before you want your pension to begin to ensure there are no delays in receiving your first payment. To apply for CPP benefits you must complete an application form and return it to Human Resources and Social Development Canada.

Old Age Security

You are eligible for OAS benefits when you turn 65 if you meet the residency requirements. OAS provides additional benefits for low-income seniors. Like the Canada Pension Plan, it is also a good idea to apply at least six months before you turn 65.

The application kits for both programs are available online at www.servicecanada.ca or by contacting Human Resources and Social Development Canada at 1-800-277-9914 (Canada/US). The federal government administers these programs and issues a reference guide entitled Old Age Security and the Canada Pension Plan which describes both programs and eligibility requirements in full detail.

Green initiatives on target

OPTrust has taken new measures to improve our environmental awareness program as we reported to you in Issue 42 of The Pension Connection. As part of our ongoing “green” initiative, we have eliminated the use of envelopes to mail The Pension Connection. You may have noticed that both the current and previous issues arrived without an envelope.

While adhering to mailing standards, we are also saving money and improving the use of paper where possible by eliminating envelopes. Of course other materials such as your personal pension information like income tax statements will always arrive in an envelope. As we continue to improve our efforts to promote a “green” environment, we will keep you informed of any initiatives that may impact you.
